

Keith Rubin

Professor Ballard

RC 2001

12 April 2026

Roundtable Reflection

I think I did pretty well on this. That being said, I did not find it very difficult. My work was grounded in my literature review, which I think was good enough that I did not need to do additional research nor much additional analysis.

Now, I was nervous about how my attendance would effect my ability to work in a group, but it was okay. I made it to class enough that our group could coordinate and present. With this relief in mind, this project went quite smoothly.

Below, I've scored myself using the rubric:

- Organization: Average – In consideration of how my segment of presentation meshed with my groupmates', I think I did okay. The presentations certainly shared a theme, but there was disjointedness overall, and we didn't convey any major trends or connections between our work. In order to help do this from my side, I think I would have needed to do more research, but the marginal benefit of this extra work did not seem justified. Within my segment of my presentation, I'm satisfied with organization; I used similar organization as in my Literature Review.

- Content: Exemplary – I think I engaged my sources well, offering interesting analysis. Much of it came from my literature review, but I added some new analysis to cater to the subject of the presentation – AI rather than Surveillance.
- Subject Knowledge: Exemplary – While I did stumble over some minor details in the presentation's execution, I think my sources gave me a good pool of knowledge that I pulled from in such a way that it conveyed solid knowledge of the topic.
- Ability to Answer Questions: NA – I did not answer any questions after the presentation. I would say that I was fairly prepared to handle questions, but that's hard to judge, because I might have been asked anything.
- Voice Quality and Pace: Average – I am not pleased with my delivery. I stumbled over some details and probably talked for a bit too long, but I think I conveyed what I wanted to say fairly clearly, though perhaps with not much persuasive effect. I score myself Average on this in consideration of imagined expectations for the assignment; under stronger expectations for delivery skill, Below Expectation may be reasonable.